

Olympic-Caliber Amenities in Luxury Real Estate: New Developments to Watch

With Paris 2024 on the horizon, luxury real estate is stepping up to offer fitness experiences beyond the basics. Simple gyms and modest pools give way to state-of-the-art wellness amenities catering to a holistic lifestyle. If residents have ever dreamed of training like an Olympian, these new luxury developments are designed to make that dream a reality. Featuring amenities fit for elite athletes, new luxury developments provide an unparalleled environment for those seeking the ultimate in wellness and fitness.

Here's a glimpse at the newest developments redefining the standards in fitness and wellness.

The Dupont

The Dupont, a new luxury rental tower standing 41 stories tall, is being developed by Rockefeller Group in a joint venture with Park Tower Group in Brooklyn's highly sought-after Greenpoint neighborhood. Residences are expected to be available in September, with most details still under wraps. However, the building promises a carefully curated selection of top-tier amenities, both indoors and outdoors, including a rooftop pool with stunning views of the New York City skyline and East River, as well as a state-of-the-art fitness center equipped with premium equipment and exceptional programming.

The architectural design of The Dupont is by the distinguished firm Gerner Kronick + Valcarcel, while the AD100 multidisciplinary design studio Workstead is creating its timeless interiors. Compass Development Marketing Group serves as the exclusive marketing and leasing partner for this property.
